Can bills/laws passed by Congress be interpreted as explicit or implicit contracts with the citizenry? If so, could contract law come into play with Obamacare? Jonathan Gruber, one of the primary architects of the law — he visited the White House 19 times, met with President Obama for hours, was cited by John Kerry, Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi, among others, as a chief architect of the law, etc. — has been heard on numerous videos admitting to and bragging about the intentional deceit, lies and misrepresentations he perpetrated to mislead the public, media, Congress and the Congressional Budget Office, whose approval of the economics/savings was absolutely required.

The videos make it very clear that Gruber knew Obamacare was a massive scam (its purported savings, was not a tax, would lower the deficit, etc.) as he manipulated findings and statistics to gain approval by key stakeholders. I'm not a lawyer, but I think contract law states that if there is fraud in the inducement or inception of a contract, then the contract can be voided. That's particularly true if economic damages ensue. We know about the damages to millions who have lost full-time jobs, had their premiums double, deductibles triple, etc.
